

CLOSING ADDRESS (Continuation)

From your applause I can see that you do agree.

The organisation of the Symposium by the Organisational Committee was exemplary and perfect. The President of the Committee, Prof. Dr. A. Lairji, and his colleagues in the committee, Dr. A. Buktana, Prof. Dr. Gilani, Prof. Dr. A. Sherief, were the soul and main-spring of this wonderful organization. As the President of CIEC I would like to thank all members of the Committee. I will not name each of them, but I would ask them to join me in displaying to the President of the University of Garyounis in Benghazi, Prof. Dr. Abdel Hafiz M. Zlitni, the Secretary for Agriculture and Soil Reclaiming, Bashir Jodah, and I thank them cordially for their esteemed support.

I would like to thank again all speakers and especially the general spokesmen and coordinators of each section, not only for the work which they have done, but also for the very topical problems treated at the Symposium. And we do not forget our most active collaborators during each of our meetings – the interpreters – who much the contact among us possible.

Thanks to all these contributors to the Symposium, thanks to our hosts of Jamahiriyah and to all the organizers of the 3rd Symposium. Our stay has been enhanced by the studious atmosphere of this hall, the charm of the University and the country of Jamahiriyah and the kind welcome.

All of this will remain in our memory.

We wish to find this atmosphere of charming cordiality, which we have here, at the next, the IXth World Congress of Fertilizers in 1983 in Scandinavia. Scientists' congresses are places for meetings with new member countries and with our colleagues of other regions. These contacts are a necessary basis for mutual understanding and esteem, and consequently for peace; they contribute, as our agriculture and our fertilizer industry do, to the welfare of humanity, fighting for freedom from hunger.

Now, I ask our friend and dear colleague, the President of the Organisational Committee, Prof. Dr. A. Lairji, to close the 3rd International Symposium of CIEC, having finished its work with great success.
